DETAILED ACTION

1. Information Disclosure Statement filed on 6/14/04 has been received.

Election/Restrictions

2. Applicant's election with traverse of the Species A in the reply filed on 4/15/05 is acknowledged. The traversal is on the ground(s) that the search would not be burdensome and there are few claims. This is not found persuasive because the two species, while having some unifying characteristics, differ greatly in structure and encompass a number of subclasses not relevant to the structure of the other species. Additionally applicant can file any number of additional claims later to the second species and therefore, the number of claims currently presented is irrelevant.

The requirement is still deemed proper and is therefore made FINAL.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

4. Claims 1,2,4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kusano et al (U. S. Patent no. 6,729,698) in view of Buschmann (U. S. Patent no. 4,746,174).

Art Unit: 3683

Kusano et al discloses a brake system that detects brake failure (specifically air inclusion) by detecting a longer than normal rise time (see figure 2) and produces an alarm when failure occurs.

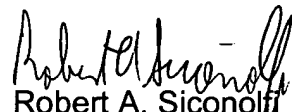

Kusano et al does not teach using this method to detect uneven wear. Buschmann teaches that uneven wear requires a longer time to reach a rise pressure (column 1 lines 42-52). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to detect uneven brake wear by longer rise times as taught by Buschmann in the system of Kusano et al as brake wear is a relatively common phenomenon which can lead to dangerous situations. Air contained in brake fluid is relatively rare since fluid brake systems are closed systems. Detection of brake wear is therefore a more important problem. It is also possible to detect wear before it seriously affects braking distance. Air inclusion is easily detected by the driver when operating the brakes.
